

REFLECTIONS

The Association of British Botanical Artists

no plants - no planet

Wendy Smith
Helen Allen, Annie Morris

Fading Away in Epping Forest
© Sandra Doyle

Nereide Gilhead
Sally Pond

an exhibition stimulating discussion about biodiversity and the impact of climate change using the medium of botanical art to tell a story through imagery

About ABBA

We are a small charity (currently around 280 members), open to all, with a focus on scientifically accurate botanical art especially of native flora. We promote and celebrate botanical art in a variety of mediums, and hope to foster relationships with organisations who offer information on plant identification and plant ecology, encouraging a wider knowledge and enjoyment of the plant kingdom.

Inspired by the United Nations 26th Climate Change Conference – COP26 – in Glasgow, our new exhibition by 66 artists from 18 countries is here <https://www.britishbotanicalartists.com/post/the-abba-gallery>

The artwork with the Kew logo is simultaneously exhibited in digital form in the Shirley Sherwood Gallery, the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew. <https://www.kew.org/read-and-watch/virtual-tour-natural-reserve>

Website: www.britishbotanicalartists.com
Email: britbotart@gmail.com
Follow us on social media
Facebook: AssociationBritishBotanicalArtists
Instagram: abba_britbotart #britbotart
And Twitter: @britbotartists

